Artificial Intelligence

Artificial intelligence (AI) tools are becoming highly advanced, surprising even their creators. Some people are concerned that AI could become (0) dangerous (danger), which is why they believe that there should be a pause in AI development. However, not everyone agrees.

Most people have probably read a book or seen a movie about an AI or a robot that has become so advanced that it can take over the world. The AI in stories like these is known as AGI or Artificial General Intelligence. A true AGI would be intelligent in many (47) _____ (differ) areas and would be able to learn on its own. Most experts believe that it will be some time before an AGI could (48) _____ (possible) be created. Most current AI tools are good at just one task, such as answering questions or identifying objects in photos.

(49) _____ (Science) have been working to improve AI models, mainly by training the models on larger and larger collections of information. Some AI models can create realistic photos from a short (50) _____ (write) explanation. Others are able to reproduce anyone’s voice saying anything based on a voice (51) _____ (record) just a few seconds long.

The most popular AI tool so far has been ChatGPT, created by the company OpenAI. ChatGPT is a Large Language Model which is trained on vast amounts of writing of all kinds and is used to generate text. ChatGPT appears to be (52) _____ (extreme) intelligent. But really, it is simply guessing – based on its training information – which word is most likely to come next.

In March 2023, OpenAI launched a more (53) _____ (power) model, called GPT-4. GPT-4 can create and explain jokes and even generate a working website from a (54) _____ (describe) and a rough drawing of the site.

ChatGPT has caused so much (55) _____ (excite) that many companies are likely to keep developing AI tools. But there are also those who want their governments to create laws to make sure that the new AI tools are safe.

Task 3 (8 points)

Read the texts (A–E) about the most important teen shows of the 90’s. Then read the statements (39–46) and decide which text each statement is about. Write the correct letter (A–E) after each statement. The letters can be chosen more than once.

An example (0) has been done for you.

A Beverly Hills, 90210

Beverly Hills, 90210, a great teen TV drama, started in 1990 and ran for ten years. The series follows the lives of the rich youth of Beverly Hills. The show starts off with the teenage twins whose move from Minneapolis to Beverly Hills results in quite a bit of culture shock as they attempt to get used to the lifestyle of their wealthy classmates. The show can be described as melodramatic and very addictive. The show influenced many great TV shows like The O.C. and Gossip Girl that explored similar themes of luxury and money.

B Sabrina the Teenage Witch

As the 1990s continued, teen dramas and comedies became a little more experimental with genres. Inspired by the comic series of the same name, Sabrina the Teenage Witch brought some magic and fun to the teen genre. The series follows Sabrina Spellman whose 16th birthday brings with it news that she is a witch with magical powers. Sabrina has difficulties balancing the everyday challenges of high school with learning how to control her powers and keep them a secret. Fortunately, she has her witch aunts and the talking cat, Salem, to help her.

C Buffy the Vampire Slayer

High school is hard enough on its own. Add being a Slayer – a fighter of vampires, demons, and other supernatural beings – to it, and it is nearly impossible to survive. The story of Buffy the Vampire Slayer starts with Buffy entering Sunnydale High School as she attempts to lead a normal life while doing her evening Slayer duties. With the help of her best friends Willow and Xander, as well as her Watcher, Giles, Buffy finds some balance in her teen years. The series blends its comedy, drama, and fantasy components to create one of the most original shows of the 1990s.

D My So-Called Life

Although it only lasted one season, My So-Called Life had a huge effect on teen TV and the greater pop culture. The series follows Angela Chase, an average 15-year-old in Pittsburgh, as she attends high school and tests out her rebellious side. Although a drama, My So-Called Life was best known for its exploration of difficult subjects such as the use of drugs. The show got positive reviews but was cancelled after 19 episodes.

E Freaks and Geeks

Freaks and Geeks follows Lindsay and her younger brother, Sam, as they struggle to fit into their separate friend groups in high school. While Sam is close with the same “geeks” he was friends with in middle school, Lindsey attempts to break away from her hardworking good girl personality by making friends with her school’s lazy “freaks”. The series only showed 15 out of 18 episodes before it was suddenly cancelled, but it remains a beloved classic to this day.

Task 2 (7 points)

Read art student Mary Manfredi’s blog post about her first visit to the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) in New York and the statements (32–38) on the next page, and decide which statement is true according to the text. Tick (✓) the correct option (A, B or C).
An example (0) has been done for you.

My first visit to MoMA

The wait is over! I finally visited the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA). Instead of taking the train, I decided to drive. I parked in the Icon Garage, hopped out and found myself only a few minutes from the museum’s entrance. First, I was a bit shocked when I saw so many people in front of the self-service kiosks. After waiting in line for 5 minutes, I got my ticket and went in. So even without booking a ticket in advance, I managed to get in quickly.

As I mentioned, this was my first trip to MoMA, but also my first experience visiting a museum mostly filled with modern and contemporary art. Their collection contains over 200,000 examples of painting, sculpture, drawing, photography, design, film, and media and performance art.

One of my aims was to study MoMA’s exhibit labels, which are notes under pieces of art. Unlike other museums, MoMA’s exhibit labels focus less on the artist or art history and more on encouraging visitors to understand how the piece of art was made. At The Met (The Metropolitan Museum of Art), the label for Paul Cezanne’s The Card Players contains a long description relating to the creation of the painting and identifying other copies made by the artist. But at MoMA, the label for Georges-Pierre Seurat’s Evening, Honfleur states, “Look how Seurat used dots of color to make this seascape.”

One of the highlights of the visit was seeing Vincent van Gogh’s Starry Night. I saw dozens of people walk up to the work, snap a photo, and proceed to walk around and observe other paintings in the rest of the gallery. Due to its popularity, I felt guilty standing in front of the piece for longer. At first, I spent a few minutes looking at the work and then circled around the gallery only to find myself making my way back to the line in the hope of catching another peek at the piece. The only exception I made to move out of the way was for a young boy who had finger painted his own version of Starry Night. Instantly, he took his plastic digital camera and snapped a picture of his masterpiece in front of the real deal. This charming moment caught the attention of everyone in Gallery 501. This showed how important museums are for people to connect with art.

The customer service at MoMA was also excellent. The gallery attendants, gift shop staff, and customer service desk workers were all warm and welcoming and made my visit even more special. When I bought some postcards, the cashier was interested in hearing about my first visit and my favorite parts of the museum.

In short, I am glad I could finally visit MoMA. It was a wonderful experience, and the staff made it even better.
